Large Memorial Stone Erected in Local Cemetery

One of the largest memorial stones shipped into Addison in several years arrived here last week. The stone weighs 3,600 pounds and is being erected in memory of the late Matthew Flynn, who is buried in St. Catherine's Cemetery. The stone is made of Barre granite and was trimmed by Burke Brothers of Barre, Vt. for Dan J. Colbert, local dealer. Two tons of sand and ten bags of cement were used in the foundation for this large stone.

The Bates Well Makes 14 Million Feet of Gas in Top of Oriskany

Latest producer in the Woodhull field was shut in before going deep into the sand — Hattie Hand watched eagerly by gas men—Casing to be run in the Tuttle well today.

The Bates well, last producer and farthest north in the Woodhull gas field was drilled in last Friday. The well gauged about 14 million feet but was only drilled slight distance into the Oriskany sand.

When the Bates well reached the Tully lime it was found to be some 50 feet lower on the structure than the Discovery well. When the Onondaga lime was struck there was a difference of approximately 67 feet between the Herrington and the Bates and the owners expressed themselves as being skeptical about whether the hole would make gas or salt water. It was not drilled farther into the sand because gas and into the salt water which always lays in the synclines where there is open sand.

The report was ciculated around Woodhull after the well was shut in that the owners were sorry they had not gone further into the sand and possibly drilled the biggest well in the field. The story went that the sand was higher in the Bates than in the Herrington. A gas man interviewed on that question yesterday stated to a representative of this paper that this was hardly possible. The Onondaga lime lays directly over the Oriskany sand, being a stratum which is about 50 feet thick. For the Oriskany to have been higher in the Bates than in the Herrington this sand would have been less than a half dozen feet thick in this well. As a matter of fact the Bates was drilled 25 feet into the Onondaga lime before it was shut down for running the casing.

Drillers at the Hattie Hand were running casing yesterday. This well will doubtless be cemented the last of the week ready for drilling in the first of next week. It is attracting the keenest interest from drillers because it lays furthest southwest of the proven field and is reported much higher on the structure than the Earl Calkins. The Hattie Hand is being drilled by C. A. Goble for Sylvania Gas Company.

The Tuttle well, another Sylvania well was down approximately 3,800 feet yesterday with about 70 feet more to run before the casing is put in. Drillers will probably start casing sometime today. The Tuttle is about the same heighth on the structure as the Herrington Discovery well.

The Hathway well was shut down yesterday afternoon waiting to run a string of water casing. This hole struck a flowing vein of water and drilling has been retarded by the wet hole. Stroupe has spudded in Hanlon and Bird's well on the Josie Lobeck farm and is drilling another well on Ackerman. The Acme Drilling Company were down to 1370 feet yesterday in the Henry Tubbs.

The Lycoming pipe line has now reached the field and the ditch is dug as far as the Henry Tubbs at the exereme eastern end. A large gang of men with machinery has been engaged in this job of laying the big line.

THE SAFE RULE

When one surveys the unbridled Japanese attack upon China, recalls the open looting of Ethiopia by Italy and reads daily of the Fascist and Communist nations of Europe striving for supremacy of their governmental creeds by merciless murder of Spanish people caught like a human buffer between two murderous groups, one must wonder. The American Legion, knowing better than any other human group in America just what are the horrors of war, devoted some time in their national convention to tell ways of keeping us out of war. Will their plans be any more fruitful than were the high ideals of Wilson who sent these same men across to fight a war which he hoped would "end war"?

What is ahead? We wonder.

We have been among the number who believed the destiny of this country is best served by isolation from the petty quarrels which make big wars across the sea. The Allies were on the verge of collapse when we went into the war, lending them huge sums of fighting material and throwing our troops in the lines at the right moment to turn the tide of the World War. Did we benefit the world as a whole by that action? There are broad grounds for doubt. The minute the firing ended the diplomats began laying the foundations for a new war by increasing instead of diminishing the grounds for international hatred. And because America would make no selfish demands for reparations against Germany our late allies looked upon us as short-sighted pikers.

Well, we thought the war ended Armistice Day. It didn't. It never has ended. Oh there was a truce while the nations of Europe could build up new armaments. But wars, like other human quarrels, are never ended until both sides forgive their enemies. And no one forgave anything. The old causes were left, the old irritants still itched the skin of those who had physically signed the treaties of peace. Nothing was settled.

The League of Nations never worked. The American Senate would not allow U. S. participation because our senators believed it was merely a trap Europe was setting to draw us into the next war. Most of the European countries signed with tongues in cheek. Treaty breaking was always a part of European diplomacy.

But how about poor China? Some political commentators express the belief we shall be drawn into that war, next. But on the side of Japan. That is unthinkable to most Americans. Of course to invoke the neutrality act would be a stroke in favor of Japan. Many Americans probably toy with the idea they would like to see China supplied with the needed arms and munitions to beat off the invader. Others would like to see the U. S. Pacific fleet steam over to the China coast and anchor off Shanghai with a curt command to Japan to cease firing.

It would work, too. Japan would abandon her "punitive" expedition to punish the Chinese so quickly the cables would not be fast enough to carry the messages, if that happened and the Japs understood we meant it. But it will not. It might have happened when Japan attacked China some five years ago, if the British had been willing to cooperate.

It's all a hopeless mess. A black maze of doubt in everything physical has engulfed this floundering world. We know that all the trust which has been put in carnal things have failed. There is only one thing which can possibly end this groping in the dark—this flying at each others' throats. That is a widespread re-awakening to Christianity. The selfish aims of nations are impotent to end strife and wars, but the wholesale application of the Golden Rule could restore the confidence of humanity.

It is the only safe rule of conduct for men or nations.

BEYOND OUR SIGHT

In 1492 Columbus sailed across the uncharted Atlantic in search of a short way to the riches of the East. He found land, but failed to find the particular land for which he sought. Yet in failing to find the riches of the East he discovered a land which was destined to become the richest in the world.

How often the truth of that is borne out in the lives of men. Many a great artist has struggled along through the years writing music, or painting while his work goes begging for buyers. Then suddenly the world wakes up to the genius, often after the artist is dead, and strings of bill collectors are replaced by a line of adoring worshipers at the shrine of his work.

A mechanic fumbles over an appliance which finally takes form in an invention. It may never make the inventor rich, it may never be identified even with his name, but he created it. And the idea which came out of a brain into a machine may prove a great blessing to mankind which generations unborn can grow to enjoy.

Human endeavor is often that way. We work for an end and fail again and again to accomplish the great purpose upon which we set our minds. But if we keep trying with an undying determination the work must finally bear its fruit. It may be music which thrills the soul after we are gone, it may be a simple appliance which opens the door to a new mechanical principle, it may be a small word wisely spoken that goes down through the generations to rightly influence the course of some wavering life.

A tree grows up to great height through the years and is finally cut down and burned. We see only a few ashes left and say, "It is all gone—lost". That is not true, for every element in that tree still exists somewhere in the universe. We are not able to see them, that is all.

Millions of years ago a great inland sea visited this part of America where we now live. Its waves piled sand upon changing shores for millions of years. Eventually in the ageless changing topography of this world that sea bed sank lower and lower and became buried under hundreds of feet of sedimentary rocks which formed from drifting soil. Could one have lived to view the spectacle revealed in that long cycle of time he might have said: "That sand and all which it contained is hopelessly buried forever under these thick layers of rocks. But he would have been wrong. For today man knows how to reach deeply into the ground and take the gas and oil from these long buried reservoirs.

What is hidden from us today may be revealed tomorrow. And every effort we put forth honestly for a worthy end will some day blossom into reality, whether or not we see the bloom.

INCONSISTENT STATE LAWS

If the legislators of this state really wish to cope with the ever-growing problems of auto accidents and traffic violations it is high time they amended the laws of the commonwealth so the state will get the cooperation of local law enforcement officials. For whole-hearted cooperation will never be obtained until local communities are reimbursed for the cost of prosecuting high way offenders.

The way the law stands local officials are supposed to arrest violators of highway laws who commit the violations in their communities. All fines collected for highway violations must automatically go to the state, while the costs of making the arrest, and court costs must be borne by the community in which the violation takes place. In other words the local community must bear the costs of arresting and prosecuting violators of the highway laws, but the state gets the benefit of the fines collected, which is something like working for nothing and boarding yourself. If a local justice sends a man to jail for violation of a highway law the state again side-steps the expense of keeping the violator in jail and the locality pays the bill. The one exception to the rule comes in the case of state troopers making an arrest and bringing the violator before a local justice. Then the state allows the local court certain definite sums for expense.

Any child should be able to see what is the effect of such a one-sided method of enforcing highway laws. Every community is trying in some measure to hold down the expense of government. Every time the officer of a local community makes a highway arrest the local unit of government is saddled with several dollars of costs from officers and justice court, yet the fines collected, if any, go to the state. The result has been a growing apathy by local officials to violations of the highway laws.

Sometimes communities resort to subterfuge to save themselves the unjust expense of these New York highway laws. Oftentimes an officer will arrest one of the most dangerous law violators on earth—a drunken driver. Now the law provides severe punishment for drivers convicted of driving while intoxicated, but there is a loophole by which local communities can escape some of the injustices of the act. Public intoxication is a violation which allows local communities to keep the fines collected from offenders, hence it frequently happens that a man who should be charged with drunken driving is charged with public intoxication. If convicted he usually pays a small fine which goes to the local community, and local officials are temporarily satisfied, while the offender himself has gotten a lucky break.

Of course the resort to this subterfuge has not given the community any permanent cure from this violator—he can go right out and drive again. Nor does it give the state any real check upon the number of intoxicated drivers who are actually being picked up on our streets and highways. It is not strictly honest for local officers or justices to thus sidestep the state law even though the state law by its very inconsistency encourages them to do so.

A short time ago state officials severely censored the police department at Hornell for charging many persons with public intoxication who should have been charged with drunken driving. Yet the real fault lays not with the city of Hornell, but with the law itself. Drunken drivers are becoming more and more a menace to sober users of the highways. The number of drunks arrested and deprived of their licenses is no accurate gauge of the thousands who should be. There is only one direct way to cure that—by changing New York laws to recompense local communities for the cost of enforcing the law.

The way to effect that change is to bring the inconsistency clearly to the minds of our representatives in Albany.

Something should be done about this during the next session of the legislature.

Mr. Justice Black and The Comic Spirit

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

IN HIS famous Essay on Comedy, George Meredith has a passage describing a force essential to the sanity of society. "If you believe," he says, "that our civilization is founded in common sense (and it is the first condition of sanity to believe it), you will, when contemplating men, discern a spirit overhead. . . . It has the sage's brows, and the sunny malice of a faun lurks at the corners of the half-closed lips. . . . Men's future upon earth does not attract it; their honesty and shapeliness in the present does; and whenever they wax out of proportion, overblown, affected, . . . hypocritical . . . ; whenever it sees them self-deceived, or hoodwinked, given to run riot in idolatries, drifting into vanities, congregating in absurdities, planning short-sightedly, plotting dementedly; whenever they are at variance with their professions . . . offend sound reason, fair justice . . . —the Spirit overhead will look humanely malign, and cast an oblique light on them, followed by volleys of silvery laughter. That is the Comic Spirit.

"Not to distinguish it is to be bull-blind to the spiritual, and to deny the existence of a mind of man where minds of men are working in conjunction.

"You must, as I have said, believe that our state of society is founded in common sense, otherwise you will not be struck by the contrasts the Comic Spirit perceives. . . . You will, in fact, be standing in that peculiar oblique beam of light."

That laugh of the Comic Spirit, more intellectual than the laugh of humor, more tempered than the laugh of satire, more kindly than the laugh of irony, deluges the air around Mr. Justice Black with its silvery volleys. What a denouement of a Great Crusade for Liberalism! What a delicate revenge for persistent assaults upon common sense, for willful refusal to acknowledge that there is "a mind of man where minds of men are working in conjunction"!

They have not, however, been working in conjunction, but at the most absurd cross purposes. "Quickly, quickly, quickly! Time will not wait on us, even while we think! Reform is urgent! Higher wages, shorter hours, better farm incomes! To conceive the ideal is to act! Economic Royalists are plotting! Nine old men stand in the way! Tories impede progress! These black robes are the symbol of Black Reaction!"

A few voices said: Gentlemen, let us sit down and think together. Let us remember that the justification of Democracy is the idea of a common good, and its attainment through reason and consensus. Let us hear both sides of each case. Let us try to find exactly what measures may really achieve for us the goal of greater prosperity for all. Let us be quite certain that we are really furthering the public good, and not just redistributing privileges, in a chaotic manner. If we call ourselves liberals, let us remember that we are, therefore, hostile to bigotry, fanaticism and blind zealotry as such. If we are conservatives, let us remember that we are sensitive to behavior, scrupulous about means.

Horse and Buggy voices! Drowned out in the chaos of rancorous clamor of saviors here and saviors there. The move to "reform the court" begins with trickery. One trick begets another. The atmosphere becomes contagious. There is a vacancy on the bench. Aha, now we have caught the President! We will give him Senator Robinson! That will hold him!

But the Comic Spirit has already drawn his bow, and there is malice, and some trace of humane pain in his feasting smile. A master whom all must acknowledge removes Senator Robinson. And the President—oh, watch that oblique light above you!—will cap that trick with yet another. I will give them one of their Social Club! Let them swallow him and like it! Gentlemen, I nominate Senator Black!

Certainly, now, there is light everywhere. The air is vibrant with light. The obedient chorus carols, "It is the light of liberalism! It is the light of progress! The people who sat in darkness have seen a great light!"

But in the midst of the light, a clear voice is ringing. Shattering the light with the silver laughter of sanity.

Is not this whole Black incident cosmically absurd? Has it not that tragic undercurrent of human folly which makes great comedy?

Who is this that comes up, robed in white, purged of the sins of the American past? Is it not a perfect symbol that the new figure on the bench should wear the White Robe of Progress, in contrast to the Black Robes of Conservatism?

Why, then, is it hooded? Why is the face of its wearer concealed, concealed into uniformity, concealed into conformity, with other masks? Why, where human eyes should look out candidly, with friendship, upon the world, are there concealing slits?

Or a Citizen of the Invisible Empire, a Knight of the Ku-Klux Klan?

The price of zealotry, of false humility, of overconfidence, of self-righteousness, of one-man rule, is injured eyesight. Angels wear white robes, but so do others. Look again. And ask others to gaze also. Do you see what I see?

Retribution, like Justice, is always poetic. It proceeds inevitably, out of men's follies. It has an inner logic.

Black May Be Forced Out By Klan Activities

In the Black case what can be done?

Here is a man on the Supreme Court about whom the following statements can farily be made:

He is a man whom the Senate would not have confirmed had the Senate known what it now knows.

He is a man whom a great majority of the country would prefer not to have on the court. The country would have turned against his appointment as the Senate would have, had the country known what it now knows. This statement applies even to persons who now support Mr. Black. Even the extreme liberals, so called, and the radicals and labor leaders, would prefer to have on the court a man who is on their side as Mr. Black is, but who lacks the taint Mr. Black has.

Mr. Black is a man whom Mr. Roosevelt would not have appointed, had he known what he now knows—that is, had he foreseen the uproar of protest that has now arisen. Mr. Roosevelt may have known, indeed must have known, of Mr. Black's association with the Klan, because the newspapers and the Senate debate discussed it repeatedly. But probably Mr. Roosevelt did not know the association was as close as revelations now show it to have been. And it is certain Mr. Roosevelt did not foresee the public uproar that has now arisen. It is fairly certain, from many evidences, that when the uproar arose, Mr. Roosevelt was deeply concerned, and would have liked to disavow Mr. Black if he could.

Mr. Black is a man who obtained his appointment presumably, and his Senate confirmation certainly, by concealment of a material fact.

Mr. Black is a man who, previous to his taking the oath as justice of the Supreme Court, had taken a prior oath utterly in conflict with his Supreme Court oath and his obligation as a justice.

Here is such a man on the Supreme Court. Can anything be done about it?

It is commonly said that Mr. Roosevelt can ask Mr. Black to resign. Sure he can—just like I can ask Mr. Chief Justice Hughes to resign. Mr. Roosevelt can only ask personally; he cannot demand officially. Mr. Roosevelt can go to Mr. Black privately and personally and say to him: "Hugo, I'm in an awful hole; it would help me out if you'd resign; you 'held out' on me when you didn't tell me you were a life member of the Klan, and you ought to resign as a favor to me."

Mr. Roosevelt can say that to Mr. Black on a private and personal basis. But Mr. Black can reply, "Nuts to you, Franklin."

Mr. Roosevelt has no official power to demand Mr. Black's resignation, any more than he can demand the resignations of the other eight justices. Mr. Roosevelt would like to have that power—on, how he'd like to. But he has not got it. If Mr. Roosevelt had power to demand resignations of justices, he need not have asked Congress for power to change the court. Mr. Black is not only appointed and confirmed. It turns out that two days after his confirmation he quietly took the oath of office before a minor public official, a notary, without waiting for the court to assemble, as would have been the ordinary way. Mr. Black has been drawing pay as a justice since August 19.

Very well, Mr. Black is securely on the court. Is there, then, nothing than can be done?

There is impeachment. But Mr. Black can be impeached only for a present, existing offense. He cannot be impeached for an offense that took place and was ended before he was appointed to the court. If Mr. Black's subscription to the Klan oath was ever terminated by resignation from the Klan, and if such resignation took place before he was appointed to the court—in that case he cannot be impeached. If, however, Mr. Black was still under the obligation of the Klan oath at the time he was appointed to the court, then most certainly he is subject to impeachment.

Whether Mr. Black's membership in the Klan, and consequently his obligation under his Klan oath, continued up to and after the time he was made a Supreme Court justice, is a question of fact. It is precisely on that fact that the possibility of his removal depends. For determining that fact the only proper process is an impeachment proceeding.

The alleged facts as set forth in the newspaper exposure of Mr. Black lead strongly to the conclusion that he was still a member of the Klan, still under the obligation of the Klan oath, at the time he was appointed to the court.

According to the newspaper exposure, Mr. Black first joined the Klan in the ordinary way on September 11, 1923. This first period of membership ended—or Mr. Black purported to end it, on July 9, 1925. On this latter date he addressed a letter of resignation to the Klan Kligraph. He was at that time a candidate for the United States Senate. The inference of the newspaper exposure is that his resignation was "phony," that he wrote it merely for the purpose of being able to say he was not a member of the Klan. The newspaper exposure indicates the resignation was never received by the Kligraph and was never acted upon but remained in the files of the local Klan.

However, whether that resignation was "phony" or genuine, does not matter at all. The real thing that is now important arose later.

More than a year later, after Mr. Black had secured his election to the Senate, he, on September 2, 1926, went through a ceremony of accepting life membership in the Klan. Mr. Black's speech accepting life membership is printed in the newspaper exposure. In the speech are some sentences having strong evidential importance. Mr. Black, accepting the life membership, spoke of "the great fraternity to which we belong." That word "we" indicates that on that date, and by the ceremony then taking place, Mr. Black regarded himself as a life member of the Klan. That word "we" may be the crux of any impeachment trial of Mr. Black.

The question is whether Mr. Black, at any time after that ceremony of September 2, 1926, terminated the life membership in the Klan which he then accepted. If Mr. Black can prove that he did terminate his life membership, then he cannot be convicted of being a member when he beeame a justice of the Supreme Court. If Mr. Black can give such public statement and proof before the next meeting of Congress, he can avert any impeachment proceeding. If he cannot give such public statement and proof, then most certainly he will be impeached when Congress meets.

Guarding Our Guarantee of Liberty

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

Since our inception as a nation, the proudest boast of our American Republic has been its guarantee of civil and religious liberty.

That guarantee is written into our Constitution. It is the first article in our Bill of Rights. It is the lodestone that has attracted to our shores, through successive decades, men of faith and character.

It is inextricably woven into the whole American tradition.

Above all things, it is that guarantee which differentiates life in America from life under the new European dictatorships, whether of individual men or of favored groups. It remains a keystone of the structure which protects free democracy from the assaults of intolerance and oppression.

The citizens of our young Republic recognized all this when they wrote into the Federal Constitution a dictum that:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

Modern Americans must recognize it too, and continue—as did their fathers—the defence of this national tradition from threats in any form, or from any source.

External vigilance remains today, as in the era of the Founders, the inexorable price of liberty.

And to that high ideal of liberty—both of action and of spirit—America still is dedicated.

Mark Twain Recounted Trials of The Early Country Newspaper

By William H. Rial
Batavia, N. Y.

Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) the famous humorist, while sojourning at his country home near Elmira, delivered a speech in which a graphic picture was presented of early life in a small town printing office where he served as an apprentice, and the description cannot be far from correct as matters stood in printing circles in the period cited.

It was at a banquet in New York City in 1886 that Mr. Clemens told of his typographical experience, which included a lot of fun and plenty of hard work. "It may be", he began, "that the printer of today is not the printer of 35 years ago. I was no stranger to him. I knew him well. I built his fire for him in the winter mornings; I brought his water from the village pump; I swept out his office; I picked up his type from under his stand; and, if he were there to see, I put the good type in his case and the broken ones in the 'hell-box'; and if he wasn't there to see I dumped it all with the 'pi' on the imposing stone—for that was the furtive fashion of the cub, and I was a cub."

On Saturdays Mr. Clemens "wetted down" the paper and "turned it Sundays"; he rolled, and washed the rollers, washed the forms, folded the papers and carried them to subscribers at dawn on Thursday mornings.

Dogs Were After Him

"The carrier", related the speaker, "was then an object of interest to all the dogs in town. If I had saved up all the bites I ever received I could keep M. Pasteur busy for a year. I enveloped the papers that were for the mail—we had 100 town subscribers and 350 country ones. The town subscribers paid in groceries and the country ones in cabbages and cordwood—when they paid at all—which was merely sometimes".

Payment for the paper was such an unusual occurrence in those days that the subscriber was always given a "puff" in the next issue. "Every man in town", the speaker went on, "helped edit the sheet—that is, he gave orders as how it was to be edited; dictated its opinions, marked out its course for it, and every time the boss failed to connect he stopped his paper. We were just infested with critics and we tried to satisfy them all."

Owned Body and Soul

One subscriber paid cash and he was more trouble than all the rest. "He bought us once a year", went on Mr. Clemens, while his New York audience was convulsed with laughter, "body and soul for $2. He used to modify our politics every which way, and he made us change our religion four times in five years. If we ever tried to reason with him he would threaten to stop his paper, and, of course, that meant bankruptcy and destruction.

"That man used to write articles a column and a half long, leaded long primer, and sign them 'Junius' or 'Veritas' or 'Vox Populi' or some other high-sounding rot; and then, after it was set up, he would come in and say he had changed his mind—which was a gilded figure of speech, because he hadn't any—and order it to be left out. We couldn't afford 'bogus' in that office, so we always took the leads out, altered the signature, credited the article to the rival paper in the next village, and put it in."

Turned Over the Ads

Whenever there was a barbecue or a circus or a baptizing, Mr. Clemens and other members of the force would knock off work for half a day to attend. "To make up for short matter", he said, "we would 'turn over ads'—turn over the whole page and duplicate it. Also in the early days of the telegraph we used to economize on the news. We picked out the items that were pointless and barren of information and stood them on a galley and changed the dates and localities and used them over and over again till the public interest in them was worn to the bone".

Seldom was attention paid to the marking of ads, declared the humorist, who cited a sheriff's sale booming serenely along two years after the sale was over and the sheriff dead. The printers used to fence with the patent medicine plates. Horse bills adorned the office walls. But Mr. Clemens never ceased singing of the glories of a forgotten age and to speak its praise.

Middletown in Orange County

Since Addison was named Middletown from 1796 until March, 1808, the comments regarding advertising in the Orange County, N. Y., Middletown Times-Herald, edited by Alan C. Madden, some 85 years ago will be of particular interest. To begin with, it appears that in the early days advertisers had an idea that in taking space in the paper they were doing a public duty and showing loyalty to the town and gave little thought of the advertising being a trade booster.

Women readers were scarce in the period up to the Civil War. Politics was Greek to the average feminine intellect. Susan B. Anthony was tried and convicted of voting at Canandiagua 64 years ago. Nation-wide advertising was unknown. In the Middletown Whlg Press on September 2, 1852, Israel O. Beattie inserted this ad: "Just Received—100 Kegs of Fall River Nails". Patent medicines ran rampant and Lydia Pinkham was right on deck.

Old-time printers, in setting ads, were bewitched into endeavoring to place all the type faces possible in an ad. More judicious use of display type began about 1870. Up to 48-point type went into ads to emphasize specials. Traveling doctors exploited their cure-alls.

Addison's Historic Streets

As part of the Founders' Celebration next spring, provided Addison civic organizations and the citizens back up such a splendid feature, there could be articles relating to the naming of Addison's historic streets, like Goodhue, Wombough, Colwell, Ames, Cleveland, Farnham, Steuben, etc., and papers regarding Curtis Park when it was a square; other parks; the Pinnacle, oil well drilling, etc. Certainly Addison's past is replete with interesting and exciting material.

Harvest Injury to Potatoes Can Be Eliminated

Not the make or type of digger is responsible for the amount of damage done the crop, but the manner in which the machine is operated, was the statement made by E. V. Hardenburg at the potato harvest meeting held by the farm bureau last Friday. His conclusions are drawn from a survey made several years ago when he observed digging operations on more than 300 New York State potato farms.

At least one-half of the damage done in harvesting the crop can be eliminated by the proper adjustment of the machine, Mr. Hardenburg stated, and that fact was demonstrated by C. N. Turner, farm engineer.

Damage was practically eliminated by carrying more dirt over the elevator, by reducing the amount of agitation and by eliminating the drop to the rear conveyor

The problem of harvest injury is of real importance, Mr. Hardenburg stated, for the reason that bruises are the principal defect of New York potatoes, as indicated by a survey recently conducted in the terminal markets.

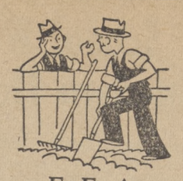
John C. McIntire

CANDIDATE FOR COMMISSIONER OF PUBLIC WELFARE FOR STEUBEN COUNTY

MR. McINTIRE is well and popularly known throughout Steuben County. In seeking the office of County Welfare Commissioner, he offers as his qualifications, long and successful experience as a practical farmer; broad knowledge of county government and finance, having ably represented the Town of Wayne eighteen years on the Board of Supervisors.

In that time he was a member of the important Good Roads Committee and also served on the Economy Committee for consideration of reduction of county expenditures. He offers his reputation for high standards of integrity, the confidence that he commands among Supervisors as well as other county officials, regardless of their political party; an absolutely "foursquare" man, who fulfills every promise, who works for the best interest of the people. Himself engaged in farming, he well realizes the problems of farmers, the largest tax-paying bloc in our county government. As County Welfare Commissioner he can absolutely be relied upon to proceed along lines of marked economy and to stop the staggering extravagance that has developed in the county welfare department. His record on the Board of Supervisors is that while often with a minority, he has always opposed many measures of extravagant and unnecessary expenditure that have greatly added to the burden of taxpayers. Mr. McIntire plans to tour the county during the remaining weeks of the campaign and hopes to meet all voters. In the meantime, if you are not acquainted with Mr. McIntire and are one of the many taxpayers who feel that expenses of the county welfare department have gotten "out of hand", take time to look up Mr. McIntire's record of public service.

Respectfully,
—INDEPENDENT CITIZENS' COMMITTEE.



F. F. A. CHAPTER CHATTER

The Bath Fair is over and our chapter has carried off the majority of the blue ribbons and a large amount of the prize money.

The real value of such an event as the Bath Fair, however, does not lie in the number of blue ribbons brought home or the amount of money secured, but rather in the educational value of the various events.

The members who did not win but learned how to prepare better exhibits for next year are the ones who really gained from the fair.

Some of our members have been inspired to purchase better livestock and poultry for the coming year, this alone is worth all the trouble and expense in putting on an exhibit at the fair.

Our chapter offered the student body our president, Joe Coleman as a candidate for the presidency of the Student Association. Joe was elected by a margin of thirty-five votes.

If he can serve the whole student body as well as he has our chapter the school is assured of a successful year from the Students Association.

Two members of the local chapter of Future Farmers of America have entered the State School of Agriculture at Alfred.

Harry Stuart a graduate of the local department in the class of '36 will take a course in Agriculture Business in feed store management which was started by various feed companies last year. While in school Harry was a member of the cattle judging team which placed third at the sectional meet at Alfred. He also was a member of the potato judging team at Ithaca.

Wilson Oakden a graduate of the local department in the class of '37 will take a course in Farm Mechanics, which will be started at Alfred this year by the various machinery companies. While in school Wilson was a regular member of the F. F. A. basketball team for three years. He was also on the F. F. A. track and soft ball teams.

If these two boys can maintain the standard set by Harold Wellman a graduate of the local department in '36, who led the Freshman class last year in scholastic standing, Addison High School can be proud of them.

Mr. Willson former principal of our high schol visited the "Ag" IV class last Wednesday afternoon. He joined in an interesting discussion with Mr. Finnerty and the boys. We wonder if they were trying to embarass the former prinsipal with their barrage of questions.

A delegates meeting of all "Ag" schools in the county will be held tonight (Thursday) at Campbell.

Two delegates from each school and the teacher will be present. At this meeting plans will be formulated for the coming year.

Some of the plans considered are F. F. A. county chapter activity contest, mid-winter meeting, spring rally, basketball league and the election of groupleader for the coming year.

The meeting will be held at the conclusion of the harvest festival and pet show which is being conducted by the Campbell F. F. A.

Mr. Finnerty, our chapter advisor, and Mr. Palmer of Corning Northside will act as judges of the various farm products. The main speaker of the evening will be Mr. Finnerty who will talk on Future Farmer Activities.

A meeting will be called of all "Ag" students Friday noon for election of officers and the formulation of the plan of work for the coming year.

Watkins Glen Meeting For Episcopalians

Clergy of the Rochester Diocese of the Episcopal Church heard general and diocesan conditions discussed Thursday at the annual district conference which opened Wednesday night at Watkins Glen.

Forty-five clergymen from parishes and missions attended. This is the first time in six years that the session has been held outside of Rochester. The area represented includes: Monroe, Ontario, Steuben, Yates, Allegany and Schuyler counties.

The clergy met Thursday and Friday morning. Friday evening laymen of the diocese took over the convention and a similar program was followed.

After the opening dinner, the group adjourned to the Rose Room of the Glen Springs for the initial convention session. With Jack Thompson, St. James organist, playing the accompaniments the meeting opened with the singing of a hymn. The opening prayer was by Rt. Rev. David Lincoln Ferris, DD, of Rochester. The Rt. Rev. Bertel H. Reimheimer, DD, Rochester, introduced William M. Leffingwell, and Rev. Guyon A. Golding, St. James rector, who gave brief speeches of welcome.

Bishop Reimheimer asserted that the purpose of the conference was "to attain a new degree of fellowship with one another, a radiant sense of fellowship which is spoken and centered in Jesus Christ Himself" . . . and "a consciousness of those common goals."

The main speaker of the evening was the Rt. Rev. Leopold Kroll, missionary bishop of Liberia.

Vividly he described the six months' rain season, the torrid temperatures and the type of native with which he deals in an appeal to give the missionary enough money to establish a Christian home and set an example that may be followed by the natives.

He said the environment was enough to sap the energy of the strongest. He appealed for a school for development of womanhood. He felt alone, he said, when he was in the depths of the "Black Kingdom" but on his return to the United States he knew that no one could be alone in God's work.

Bishop Kroll has served as missionary to Indians, in the Hawaiian Islands, Africa, Korea, Tahita, and in other foreign wildernesses. He spoke at length on race study.

"But in spite of all the handicaps", he said, "we are somehow progressing. But it is mighty unkind to send a man there alone".

VAN VLEETS

Miss Frances Rogers has returned to her work in Corning.

Mr. and Mrs. George Holley and infant son, George Jr. were week-end guests of her father L. H. Van Vliet.

Mr. and Mrs. Merve Van Vliet of Draper spent Sunday with his uncle, L. H. Van Vliet.

Home Bureau State Federation Meet At Hammondsport

The Western District of the New York State Federation of Home Bureaus will meet in Hammondsport on Monday, October 4, at the Methodist Church. The program will be in charge of Mrs. John H. Creveling, chairman, of Mt. Morris, and will begin at 10 o'clock. Mrs. H. D. Wood, chairman of the Steuben County Home Bureau, will welcome the group. MARVELS OF INDUSTRY

Research experts in industrial laboratories are providing an interesting glimpse of the future. A waterless soap has been developed. Wine has been successfully utilized as a component of motor fuel. Industry has learned to make a sponge from wood and cotton which is superior to nature's product. Artificial wool has been made from cheese. A machine is being developed which runs on the power of the rays of the sun.

I Pick 'em Up
TRUE STORIES OF HITCH HIKERS
by L. ELLIS EVONS

30 Days In The Chain Gang

If you cannot get paid for working—why work? So thought a young farm hand of Delaware County, Pennsylvania.

When I picked him up he had just finished a wanderlust that had taken him to all parts of the country. He was almost back home again and had had enough of roughing it around the country.

When I asked him how he found the going, he opened up in a way that would have done credit to one of Lowell Thomas' tall stories.

"You see mister," he began, "I worked on a farm at Marple, not much money, but I got by and then the farmer couldn't pay me anything. So I thought I might as well see the country.

"I started out in my best clothes and two dollars in my pocket. I got a hop to Harrisburg and then caught a freight to Altoona. It was a coal train and gee, you should have seen me when I got off the freight. Was I dirty? Well, before I had been away long, I was dirty a lot of times. It was Spring and I met some fellows. They said tehy were going down to North Carolina to pick strawberries.

"I decided to go along. We got down to Willard, North Carolina. By heck they certainly pay some money. I got 90 cents a week with board and a pair of overalls. Well, I thought I was seeing the country.

"Three other boys and myself worked our way to Wilmington and Charleston. There we got jobs on a ship to Porto Rico. I got the fever down there. Boy, was I sick, and was I glad to get back. I landed back in Charleston.

"It was hard to get a lift on the road so I hopped a freight. There were about 40 guys on that freight in a couple of box cars. Down South if they catch you riding with the colored, it is just too bad. All the colored were in one car and the white fellows in the other. When it was night, the freight stopped and the railroad police came along the cars, firing their guns and putting spot lights on us.

"Oh boy, talk about a scramble. It was like a lot of rats dsserting a sinking ship. The colored fellows were wise and beat it off the tracks. A couple of white boys and myself hid in the grass along the tracks. The police came along with their flash-lights but did not see us. Then the freight started again. I got up to make a run for it and in the dark, ran right into the arms of one of the bulls.

"They took me up to a water tank. There were a lot of other fellows who had been caught. They took us to the town which turned out to be Raleigh, N. C. They gave us a mock trial before a local judge and I found myself in the chain gang for thirty days. They put us on the roads. They did not put chains on us but they had guards to see that we did not escape.

"When my time was up, they turned me over to the government camp for transients. They asked me if I wanted go home. When I said yes, they let me go.

"I had nothing to go home for, so when I got out of town, I got a hop and started west.

"I was wise to some of the tricks of the road now and thumbed my way and hopped freights. I got all the way to California and I guess I am glad to get back home again. I have been away for over two years."

The young fellow did not look the worse for wear, though he had no hat and not much in the way of clothes. Apparently his hardships had only made him healthier.

Screen Lined Cooking School Will Show Close-up of Modern Home

Stream lines are a familiar sight this season.

But the latest news in Cooking School conventions, as discovered by The Addison Advertiser, has screen lines.

All of which means that long lines of eager pupils will be going to school again Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 11, 12 and 13, when this newspaper presents the much - discussed motion picture course in home economics in the Avon Theatre.

Going to school in a theatre! It's a grand way to combine fun, inspiration, a neighborly reunion and valuable instruction, all in one free package. It's a grand way to get out of the rut that often threatens the best and most conscientious of home managers.

Just as fresh inspiration for the old job is one of the by-products of the familiar Cooking School, which presents a lecturer in a model kitchen, so are new ideas and keen incentive born in the film class for homemakers, with its novel approach and modern setting.

The kitchens that passed the screen test for this picture had to meet the exacting requirements of nationally-known home economists, as well as Hollywood standards of charm, good taste and proportion.

No "false-front" camera-beautiful kitchens satisfied these specialists. They insist on working in complete, compact, modern kitchens, which actually reflect more scientific ingenuity and careful planning than any living room.

In these practical kitchens, stream lines is no idle phrase, for this simplified, sanitary, labor - saving equipment is keyed in style and purpose to a busy age.

Recognizing the demands of home experts, Hollywood signed all-star kitchens with all-star cast, adding a continual procession of close-ups, so that every seat in the Avon Theatre is a good seat for this amazingly pictured household course.

The class isn't all work, for there is the constant play of sparkling humor, the appeal of tender romance, and the suspense of a coherent, intelligently-directed story, which dramatizes everyday happenings—the human sort of things that really do happen.

Binding the attractive story together is the romance of homemaking, a subject that holds the interest of every woman young and old. Even the Addison Advertiser knows that all women — brides, business types and experienced housekeepers, respond to the fascination of looking in on another woman, when she is at work in the kitchen.

Particularly do they like it when they are allowed to sit quietly and watch her prepare some dish, in which she specializes. They know that if they watch closely, while she measures and mixes and completes the entire cooking operation, this close-up personal study will be more helpful than hours of reading recipes or blind experimenting.

Not only does every person in the audience share this close-up of each stage of the actual preparation, but the kitchen expert clearly explains her methods, so that the measurements on the free daily recipe sheets will make it possible to duplicate that feathery cake and flaky pastry.

Chatting in true neighborly style with her listeners in Avon Theatre, the presiding home manager will pass on her own discoveries in lavor-saving short cuts. There will be dozens of helpful hints and suggestions for utilizing valuable kitchen products and lavor-saving equipment.

Busy women will thrill to the convenience of one-dish meals and economy in marketing and cooking possible through full use of the electric refrigerator.

Other homemakers may find special interest in the thorough screen study of laundry methods. French frying and shallow pan frying will be considered. There will be simple thrift meals, party and late supper dishes and guidance to entertaining with confidence. Even beauty secrets, so dear to every feminine heart, will not be overlooked.

Worried questions, put by the bride-pupil in this screen romance, are bound to solve many a problem for more experienced housekeepers. Peer into the mixing bowl with her and see how it's all done, or join her in a study of the wonders of frozen desserts and molded ice-box salads that taste even better than they look.

Free recipe sheets will be distributed daily, so that the inspiration of the new recipes can be carried home accurately.

Although it won't be possible to lift those tantalizing culinary triumphs out of the picture, there will be plenty of daily gift bundles at this profitable 1937 school.

No one interested in home problems can afford to miss The Addison Advertiser free Cooking School, starting October 11 and continuing through October 12 and 13 in the Avon Theatre.

E. R. Hardenbrook Speaks to Group of Social Workers

Corning—E. Ray Hardenbrook, Steuben County Commissioner of Welfare, in an address before 100 social workers and educators at the Northside High School, gave an outline of the methods required to adjust a homeless child to foster parents. He spoke on "Desirable Homes for Homeless Children" and, in part, said:

"In placing a child with foster parents it is necessary to so adjust temperaments that friction may be eliminated and a community of interests established from the inception of the new relationship. Each child must be treated as an individual to develop its personality to the limit.

"Children's work should not be combined with other forms of public aid but maintained as a distinct unit. Only trained workers, mentally equipped to handle all types of children's problems, should be employed. Their full time and continued work contributes greatly to the success of child placements.

"Liquor is all too often a contributing factor to juvenile delinquency and the Welfare Department, empowered by law to act as the guardian of any child apt to become delinquent, will prosecute every sale to minors if sufficient evidence for the Grand Jury can be secured.

"To help children in boarding homes I intend to ask the Supervisors to consider a small appropriation to provide each child with a small allowance for church contributions and similar needs. These children should be kept from feeling that they are wards of the county and one way is to enable them to make their religious offerings in common with all other children coming under the influence of spiritual leaders. It would be money well spent."

Mrs. Farnham Heads Women's Civic Club

The group will conduct a membership drive during the coming weeks and any woman in Addison interested in public affairs is invited to attend and join. A meeting will be held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the American Legion rooms, in the form of a tea with Mrs. Carrie Coburn as chairman.

Among those who attended were: Mrs. Farnham, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Auringer, Mrs. LaGrange, Mrs. Brewster, Mrs. Irving Gladstone, Mrs. Lewis Handy, Mrs. Maple Woodhouse, Mrs. Lynn A. Taylor, Mrs. Matthew Whitmore, Mrs. Melvin G. Hubbs, Mrs. John Crane, Mrs. George Freeman, Mrs. Edwin Morris and Mrs. Coburn.

Girl Scouts Plan Membership Campaign

Girl Scouting in Addison is being renewed this year with vigor, there being a larger registration than ever before in the history of the local troop. The troop Executive Board is headed by Mrs. Irving Gladstone with Mrs. Matthew Whitmore as vice-president and Mrs. Francis Hill as secretary-treasurer. Other members of the Board are Mrs. Hugh Varn, Mrs. Dixon Curtis and Mrs. Peter Laffakas. Mrs. Harold Smith is in active charge of the troop as captain.

The largest increase in registration memberships in the history of the organization is reported by the Girl Scouts for the first six months of 1937. National headquarters has announced that total registration to date is 429, 711, an increase of 35, 345 since the first of the year and nearly three times greater than during the same period last year.

The figure covers registration of Brownies, the junior Girl Scouts between seven and ten years of age the intermediate group between ten and fourteen, and the older girl group from fifteen to nineteen. Girl Scout troops carry on their activities in every state of the Union and in Puerto Rico, Hawaii and Alaska.

Among the reasons suggested for the membership increase is the emphasis placed this year upon the world scope of Scouting during the Silver Jubilee celebration and as a result of the recent international encampment. Staff and field workers interpret membership in the organization as participation in a world wide movement, embracing thirty-three countries and commanding respect and prestige everywhere. The progressive interpretation of program activities, which adapt themselves to girls according to their age and specific environment, are also responsible for the stimulation of membership.

AHS Football Squad Ready for Arkport

Coach Bill Miller of the high school football squad has been running his charges through a stiff period of practice in anticipation of the opening game of the year with Arkport to be played Friday afternoon at Arkport.

Two games have been played against a team of alumni and other high school students to give the players an opportunity to utilize the plays they have learned in classes conducted during practice sessions. They have been given several plays and are specializing in two trick plays plus the brawn for which the locals are known in any sport.

Touch football is new to this vicinity and offers an opportunity for participation to many students who like outdoor athletics. Many of the dangers of regular football are eliminated in this game and play is much faster than regular football.

Drs. Kelly and Whitmore Are Changing Locations

Dr. and Mrs. Miles Kelly will leave Addison soon for their new home in Avoca where he is going to take over the practice of Dr. Orman Stafford Whitmore, another former local resident, who is going to Bath.

Dr. Whitmore has been in Avoca for the past three years but a great deal of his work has been in Bath since the completion of the Memorial Hospital, hence his desire to move to Bath where the greater part of his work is.

He is a graduate of Addison High School and Syracuse University and the University Medical College. Upon completion of his collegiate work he interned in the Syracuse Memorial Hospital. He married Miss Eleanor C. Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Brown of this village. Dr. Whitmore has leased the office formerly occupied by Dr. V. S. Higby in West Pulteney Square and is planning to live in Gansevoort street.

Dr. Kelly, also a native Addison physician, received his graduate work in the University of Buffalo and the medical school attached thereto. He received his internship in St. Joseph's Hospital, Elmira. Dr. Kelly married the former Dorothy Hopper of Addison. They will make their home in the house where Dr. and Mrs. Whitmore lived.

Cornell Strengthened After Penn State Win Gets Ready for Colgate

Cornell's chances for a successful football season are looking up. Not only did the Big Red win from Penn State 26 to 19 last Saturday with a whirlwind last minute finish but they did it with the husky center Hughes on the sidelines. And doubtless one of the most satisfying angles of the win to Coach Snavely was the stellar work of the Sophomore back, Baker who passed and plunged his team to victory. He made three touchdowns.

Cornell was known to have a strong line, but the backfield has been a question mark. With Baker teaming with the speedy Peck and the latter showing his ability to hurl long passes the team promises a lot of headaches for Princetown, Syracuse, Columbia Yale, Dartmouth and Pennsylvania. The crucial test for Snavely will come Saturday when Cornell meets Colgate in the first resumption of an old series at the crescent. Andy Kerr has his usual strong team ready for this game, while Cornell will be further strengthened by the return of the injured back Dorius, Gilderslieve a regular back last year and Hughes who is back in the harness recovered from an early season injury. This game is a "natural" for central New York fans and a huge crowd is awaited in the Cornell stadium.

Colgate had an easy time winning from St. Lawrence last Saturday in a "warm-up" game, so there is no basis for comparison of the two elevens in advance. But knowing something of the tricks of the wily Kerr Snavely has a team of "Red Raiders" going through some hocus pocus against his first three elevens in preparation for the Saturday meeting.

Plan Similar Farm Program

An agricultural conservation program similar to the one this year in New York State is the proposal for 1938, according to Roy A. Porter of Elba, chairman of the state committee. Virtually the same soil-building practices and payments on substantially the same scale are planned, he says.

Three essential changes are noted in the 1938 plan for farmers:

1. It offers opportunity for special acreage stabilization for potatoes. All commercial potato growers in New York will decide by October 2 whether they favor this plan.

2. On a limited number of farms in the state that grow grains on a commercial scale, payments may be based on stabilization of grain acreage as well as on soil-conserving crops and soil-building practices.

3. On farms in areas subject to severe erosion, part of the farm's payment may be made for changes in organization of crops necessary to protect the farm against erosion. These changes would be in addition to regular soil-building practices approved for the entire state.

In each county, says Mr. Porter, the county agricultural conservation committee will help to determine for each farm a general soil-depleting goal. Soil-building practices and payments are provided in much the same way as in this year's program. A maximum payment will be calculated for each farm.

In deciding on practices, the farmer and the county committee, as far as practicable, will agree on specific soil-conserving crops and practices that most effectively promote soil conservation, according to the plan.

Jane Todd Heads GOP Women

Miss Jane H. Todd of Tarrytown, new state leader of Republican women, has demonstrated that a woman can be a successful housekeeper and at the same time achieve success in public life. Over a period of thirty years she has demonstrated marked enthusiasm in her home. At the same time she has risen to heights in the political life of the state.

She has served three terms as a member of the Assembly and is a candidate for a fourth term from the fourth district of Westchester County. Her record in the Legislature has won nation-wide attention and she has been acclaimed for her activities on behalf of women.

In the political field she was one of the first women to serve as a district leader. She worked up through the ranks, serving as active head of the Republican organization in her county and is now vice-chairman of the Republican State committee. She was chosen last week at a meeting in Syracuse to succeed Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, who resigned as leader of the women's division.

For several years Miss Todd fought to obtain for women the privilege of serving on juries. Her idea was that, inasmuch as women's interests are involved in litigation before the courts, there was no reason why her sex should not be represented on juries deciding issues of fact. It was mainly through efforts of Miss Todd that a woman juror bill was passed by the last Legislature and signed by the Governor. The new law became effective September 1.

Another legislative achievement of Miss Todd was the law, effective September 1, which requires a lapse of 72 hours after a marriage license is applied for before it is issued. The idea behind this measure was to stop hasty marriage. Other states are already taking steps to copy the Todd law.

Miss Todd was one of those active in the campaign to win for women the right to vote. Shortly after the suffrage amendment was approved in 1917, she was invited by the late William L. Ward, Republican leader of Westchester County, to serve as co-committeeman in her district in Tarrytown. In 1919 she was chosen vice-chairman of the Republican committee of the town of Greenburgh and the following year was made a member of the Republican County campaign committee.

In 1921 Miss Todd helped to organize the first county-wide club of Republican women. During the same year she was appointed a member of the Republican executibe committee of Westchester County. In 1928 she was appointed acting vice-chairman of the county organization and a year later was formally elected to the post.

After Mr. Ward died in 1933, Miss Todd was appointed chairman of a steering committee that looked after party affairs in the county. In this position she was for about a year the actual head of her party organization in one of the state's largest counties.

The new woman leader has been a delegate to all Republican state conventions since 1920 and she attended the Republican National conventions in 1932 and 1936, serving as vice-chairman of the New York delegation at Chicago in 1932.

Miss Todd is a charter member of the Women's National Republican Club and a member of the board of governors; charter member of New York State Republican Women, Inc.; member of public relations committee of the American Women's Association; member of advisory committee of the Association of Business and Professional Women, and member of Tarrytown Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

In 1935 she was one of 25 women of the nation cited by the Business and Professional Women, being honored for her work in behalf of women in the Legislature.

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

Beautifying Roadsides
Hugh J. Williams

Roadside improvement gives opportunity for property owners, civic clubs and highway departments to cooperate in building safer, more attractive and more economical roads and roadsides.

Carefully kept slopes prevent erosion and later expense for cleaning ditches and culverts. Property values are enhanced by roadside development. Traffic hazards are reduced by keeping mud and debris from coming onto the highway.

Control of sign and billboards means less distraction for drivers. Well placed gasoline stations and refreshment stands leave ample room for parking off the highway. Finally, the attractive development of roadsides make for pleasant impressions as travelers use the highways, and visitors leave the community with the hope of coming back again to enjoy both the beauty and safety of well-made and well-kept roads and roadsides.

Roadside improvement consists of two major activities. The first has to do with the removal of rubbish, the filling of unsightly mudholes, the removal of billbcards and objectionable signs. The second task is to plant attractive flowers, shrubs and trees in a way that will not hide curves, railroad crossings and other danger spots along the highway.

Federal Funds For Farmers

The purpose of the Rural Rehabilitation Division of the Farm Security Administration is to assist rural families that for one or more reasons such as too heavy debts, loss of cattle, lack of equipment, etc., are not able to carry on. The funds and services available from the Farm Security Administration are to put these rural families on a basis where they can carry on.

Such families are furnished information about farm and home management practices, finances for purchases of livestock, household needs; for seed, feed, fertilizer, taxes etc., and supervision in the use of this money and in management of their farms and homes.

The money is loaned the families by the Farm Security Administration at 5 per cent interest with a period for repayment varying in some cases up to a limit of five years.

In order that a family may become a client of the Farm Security Administration and receive assistance therefrom, they must be located on a farm which is good enough to give the family a living and gradually repay any loans made, or on a farm that can be made to supplement an established industrial income to a point where the family will be in a position to live and repay its debts. The man and his wife or those running the farm must have sufficient initiative and ability, (with supervision), to make the farm give the family a living under normal conditions. They must be able to get finances from bank or other loaning institutions.

Before funds are furnished the family by the Farm Security Administration, the family agrees to operate the farm and home under supervision of a plan worked out by the family and representatives of the Farm Security Administration.

The Farm Security Administration has funds to finance groups or individuals in purchase of high priced machinery where it can be shown that such machinery may be used for the benefit of the group. Farmers who cannot borrow from bank and other sources are eligible. The rate of interest is three per cent and the loan may be extended over a period of five years. Binders, Silo Fillers, Threshers, Trucks for milk hauling, Tractors, etc., are examples of types of machinery which are being financed. If any one farmer can act as agent for a group, they are eligible for a Cooperative Loan.

Any family that feels it can quality for this assistance and desires to obtain it should make application to the Rural Rehabilitation Supervisor, G. L. Stevenson, Post Office Budg., Wellsville, N. Y. Mr. Stevenson has a temporary office at the Farm Bureau, Bath on Wednesday and Thursday of each week.

This Week in Sports

By the Grandstander

The Giants are maintaining their lead in the National League and it looks like a nickel series is assured. Metropolitan area fans will not object to the series. Our guess is that the Yankees will be the most popular team with the New York fans. They have dash and color while the Giants are more businesslike.

While the Giants were going ahead of Brooklyn over the week-end Lefty Gomez was bearing down on the Red Sox to beat them 5 to 2 and gained his 21st Yankee victory this season. He is now tied with the great Hubbell in number of victories this season.

Miss Ragnhild Hveger, 17, established a new world's record for the woman's back stroke swim Saturday by going the 150 yards in 1.49 and four-fifths seconds. Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, stormy petrel of the last Olympics set the record in 1934 at 1.52.

The St. Louis Cardinals sponsored 15 training camp schools thruout the country during the past few months. Over 4,000 potential big leaguers attended and from these were chosen 200 youths who will be sent to spring training camps. St. Bonaventure's football opened its season with a loss being defeated by the Manhattan College team of Chick Meehan, New York to a score of 21 to 12. The teams battled nearly even in the opening stanzas but could not maintain the pace when the Metropolitan squad opened its bag of tricks.

Woodhull Defeats Elkland 6 to 5

The hard-hitting Woodhull Cardinals won the first of a three-game series from Elkland at Woodhull Sunday by a score of 6 to 5. The game was one of the best played this year. Drake was the star hitter for the day by getting two singles, a double and a walk from six trips to the plate. Davenport polled one for a four-sacker in the eleventh but on his way he failed to touch the first bag and the ball was relayed to Drake at first and the umpire called Davenport out.

Methodists Meet In Rochester For Conference

Plans for participation in the world-wide celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of Methodism and for further activity in the Million Unit Fellowship Movement are among the principal items of business of the 1937 session of the Genesee Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which opened on Tuesday at Rochester.

The Monroe Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church of Rochester, of which the Rev. Robert Kazmayer is pastor, is host to the session and Bishop Adna Wright Leonard of Pittsburgh, head of the church in that area, is president.

Dr. W. E. Shaw, Secretary-Counsel of the Million Unit Fellowship Movement, one of the church agencies in charge of the anniversary celebration, is attending the conference to present plans for the movement.

The General Conference Commission on Evangelism, the second agency directing the anniversary plans, is represented by the Rev. Weldon F. Crossland, D. D., pastor of the Asbury-First Methodist Episcopal Church, Rochester. Bishop Ralph S. Cushman is chairman of the Commission.

A preliminary observance of special study is an important part of the celebration. Thus, September and October will be devoted to consideration of "The Place of the Church", November and December to "Christian Home Life", January and February to "Building a Christian World", and March and April to "Personal Commitment to the Christian Cause". The subject assigned for May and June is "The Christian and His Experience of God."

Evangelistic retreats, radio broadcasts and distribution of special literature also are planned for the observance, which will reach great intensity during the Lenten and Easter season, and its climax on Sunday, May 22 and Tuesday, May 24. The celebration will continue on Pentecost Sunday, June 5.

As part of the anniversary observance and of the Million Unit Fellowship Movement, national emphasis will be made, during the coming year, on a special effort to increase attendance at the regular Sunday services of the Methodist churches and a Covenant of daily prayers will be offered.

Methodists in Addison and vicinity will take part in these observances being carried out on a national scale. The Rev. Garland G. Lacey is in Rochester attending the conference sessions.

Perhaps the most common error in the management of permanent pastures is to continue grazing too late in the fall. After animals are removed, not enough time remains for the pasture to recover before winter sets in.

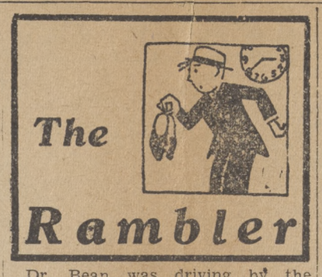
The largest plants known to man are probably the giant sequois or redwoods of the Pacific Coast.



Dr. Bean was driving by the Meritt Baker farm home around 11:30 last Wednesday and noted men working on the barn. He thought to himself, "What a height to fall from", and sailed on his way. Arriving at home he was met by Mrs. Bean who sent him right back to the Meritt Baker farm where Howard Beers had fallen and had been killed. It had not taken five minutes for the trip to Addison from the vicinity of the Baker barn.

The Future Farmers of the Addison High School are going to run a little column of gossip of their own in this paper each week. It is hoped to accomplish two things by this column. The Boss and Co., celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary last Saturday night. It was quite a party and if they celebrate their 50th anniversary and double the crowd they will have to put an extension on the barn to accomodate the crowd. On behalf of the staff members the Rambler expresses to Mr. and Mrs. Maurice E. Miller our most sincere congratulations and a wish that they will celebrate many more anniversaries.

Incidentally the Mrs. and I have not celebrated our second yet so we have something to look forward to.

And that reminds me that we have been going to start an anniversary column in this paper for some time. We are going to report birthdays and wedding anniversaries of the people in our reading parish each week. Nope we won't tell how old or how many years for we know some would object. News on this will be announced later.

CCC Eligibility Rule Changed for Enrollees

This office has received a notice from the Federal Government that there is an additional revision which causes a change in the rules so that with reference to eligibility of boys who have had previous service, the regulation will read:

"Any honorably discharged former CCC enrollee who has been out of the Corps for at least six months and is otherwise eligible for selection, may be re-selected for enrollment in October."

In other words, there is no restriction as to the length of service the boy may have had so long as he was honorably discharged.

Will Conduct Job Census By Mailing Post Cards

President Roosevelt decided before leaving for the Pacific Coast that the administration's voluntary unemployment census should be made by the Post Office Department delivering 31 million registration cards to homes before December 1.

Details of the count, expected to give the government its first definite information on the number of jobless and partially unemployed in the United States, were discussed by Mr. Roosevelt with John D. Biggers, census enumerator.

The census, to cost about five million dollars or less, will be made by December 1 of possible, Biggers said that date was set because the Post Office Department would be busy during December with the Christmas mail rush.

The cards will be delivered by regular mail carriers. Unemployed will be urged by an intensive educational and publicity campaign to fill out their cards promptly and return them to Washington thru postal facilities. Employed persons will not need to answer the questions.

The card, Biggers said, will carry a "brief, simple message over the facsimile of President Roosevelt" asking every unemployed person to register.

AHS Football Season Opens At Arkport

Touch football will be the official fall game for the Addison High School football squad this season. The opening game will be played Friday afternoon against Arkport at Arkport.

The local squad of 18 men has been out practicing nights in preparation for this game. They have been running through plays and learning formations in preparation for an active season. The varsity squad has not been chosen as yet. Coach Miller will use most of the fellows to determine what will be the best available material to compose the varsity.

Touch football has the thrills of the regular game without its expense and roughness for there are no flying tackles in it. However the fast field plays, forward passes and quick shifts are present in the game. A nine-man team is used, tackles being eliminated.

The schedule for the Addisonites this opening season is as follows:

October 1—at Arkport
October 6 or 8—Avoca here
October 15—Jasper here
Actober 22—at Avoca
October 27—Arkport here
November 5—at Jasper.

Coach Miller has made a plea for student support in this game. He states that there will be no incentive to play for the members of the team if the students do not turn out for games.

Alfred Registration is Below Last Year

Alfred University opened for registration on Monday, September 20 with 592 students which is nearly the same as a year ago.

Of those registered 188 were freshmen which is an increase of about 15 over last year. The enrollment in the freshman class is distributed as follows: Liberal Arts, 73; Ceramic Engineers, 86, Ceramic Art, 28.

The reason the total enrollment has not been increased seems to be due to the fact that a number of the sophomores, juniors and seniors did not return because they had secured employment of a more or less permanent character. Some of these will be returning the second semester.

A number of students are expected to register so that the total enrollment should not be very different from a year ago.

Alfred Defeats Hartwick 27 to 0

Alfred Saxons wiped out remembrance of a scoreless tie from last year by defeating Hartwick College 27 to nothing.

Next Saturday, October 2, on Merrill Field at 8:00 the Saxons will meet Ashland College. The following Saturday Thiel will come to Alfred for the Homecoming game.

Crane Agency To Award Medal

The members of the 9th year social study classes of Addison High School are to participate in a novel essay contest sponsored by the Hartford Fire Insurance Co., and the Crane Insurance Agency. The subject of the contest is fire prevention and activities will center around National Fire Prevention Week which is scheduled for the week of October 3-9.

As a part of the school work the students will study fire prevention with the aid of booklets furnished by the sponsors of this contest. They will then make a survey of their own homes and apply the principles of fire prevention wherever necessary. After this has been done the students will write an essay on "How the Principles of Fire Prevention Have Been Applied in My Own Home".

This contest is being sponsored by the Hartford Fire Insurance Company and its local agent, the Crane Insurance Agency with the hope that it may be of actual and practical value to the participants. Prevention of fires means the saving of homes from serious damage or destruction and the saving of lives. It should be as much a part of the fire insurance business as the selling of mere policies and the paying of losses. The recent trend in losses from fires has been upward and needlessly so as most fires are preventable. The sponsors feel that some good may be done in this contest, for it is possible that one home, maybe more, may be saved from damage by the thought and study the contest will encourage.

The prize which will be awarded to the author of the best essay on "How the Principles of Fire Prevention Have Been Applied in My Home" consists of a medal engraved with the name of the winner. The medal is on display in the window of the Crane Insurance Agency. Further news of the contest will be in this paper next week.

Gaynor-March In Selzinck's "Star is Born"

Janet Gaynor and Fredric March come to the Avon Theatre for three days starting with a mid-night show Saturday at 11:15 in David O. Selznick's technicolor production "A Star is Born".

This glamorous story of a little country girl who came to Hollywood, faced the odds of 100,000 to one and scaled the heights of stardom, marks the first up-to-the-minute story to be filmed in technicolor.

Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Andy Devine and Lionel Stander are featured in the supporting cast, which also includes Owen Moore, Peggy Wood, Elizabeth Jenns, Edgar Kennedy, J. C. Nugent, Guinn Williams and others.

William A. Wellman directed "A Star is Born" from a screenplay by Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell and Robert Carson. The original story was by Carson.

The film shows many famous Hollywood landmarks in their natural colors for the first time. Among these are the Trocadero, world-famous night club, Grauman's Chinese Theatre, the Santa Anita race track, the Baltimore Bowl as it looks during the annual banquet of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and sciences, the Hollywood Legion Stadium, where the stars see their prize fights, the Hollywood Bowl, the Brown Derby, celebrated eating place, and the famous intersection of Hollywood boulevard and Vine Street, the center of movieland .

School Officials at Attendance Meeting

Principal Irving R. Gladstone, Superintendent of Schools Frank H. Smith and Attendance Officer Elroy O. Hannahs were in Corning Friday at an Attendance Officers' meeting held in the Northside school.

Several speakers were on the program and many ideas were furnished those present. Laws involving attendance at school were outlined. The principal provision of interest was that giving attendance officers power to act outside of their own school district. Students attending AHS living in districts outside the community can be subject to the attendance officer in this district.

Onolee Little Is A. H. S. Tennis Champ.

Onolee Little added the Addison High School girls' tennis crown to her athletic honors by defeating Ellen Knebel in two out of three sets in the finals of the girls' tennis tournament. Little captured the first set 6-4 but Knebel came back to win the second 6-4. In the final set Little completely bewildered her opponent to win match set 6-1.

The only other match to go the whole three sets was the semi-final match between Betty Perry and Ellen Knebel. The first set of this match was the most interesting of the tournament with Miss Knebel emerging the victor after the set had been tied three times, winning 9,7. Perry took the second set 6-2 but Knebel ended the match with a love set. Little trounced Lucy Beers in the other semi-final match taking the first set 6-2 but having a hard time to take the second 7-5.

The opening matches saw Perry win over Pauline Martin 6-1, 6-3; Knebel defeat Alice Magoon 6-2, 6-0; Little captured her match with Janet Whitmore 6-1, 6-4, and Lucile Shoemaker forfeited her match to Lucy Beers.
